Currently he is completing a book on geopolitics, science, and the origins of modern ocean law, 1937-80; continues with research on the history of American federalism, and on law, technology, and American economic development; and is the editor and a chapter author for a forthcoming five-author history of the California Supreme Court scheduled for publication in 2002.

Gregory S. Alexander is the A. Robert Noll Professor of Law at Cornell Law School, where he has been since 1984. He has written extensively in property law as well as American legal history. His book, Commodity & Propriety: Competing Visions of Property in American Legal Thought, 1776-1970 (Univ. of Chicago Press, 1997), was selected as "Best Book of the Year [1997] in Law" by the American Publishers Association. An earlier article, "The Transformation of Trusts as a Legal Category, 1800-1914," received the Society's Erwin Surrency Prize as the best article published in the Law & History Review during 1987. He has appeared on numerous panels at annual meetings of the Society and has served on the Society's Planning Committee for the Annual Meeting. This past year he served on the Committee on Honors. Also this past year he served as Chair of the Willard Hurst Prize Committee of the Law & Society Association. He was recently awarded a Fellowship at the Center for Advanced Study in the Behavioral Sciences, in Palo Alto, and will be at the Center during the 2003-04 academic year.

Thomas J. Davis is professor of history and visiting professor of law at Arizona State University in Tempe. A Phi Beta Kappa graduate of Fordham University, he earned a M.A. and Ph.D. in United States history and African history from Columbia University, a M.A. in journalism from Ball State University in Muncie, Indiana, and a J.D. from the University at Buffalo. His books include The New York Conspiracy (Beacon Press, 1971); A Rumor of Revolt: The 'Great Negro Plot' in Colonial New York (Free Press/Macmillan, 1985; pb. University of Massachusetts Press, 1990), which won the Gustavus Myers Center Honorable Mention Award as one of the best books published in 1985 on racial intolerance in the United States; and Africans in the Americans: A History of the Black Diaspora, with Michael L. Conniff (St. Martin's Press, 1994). A life-member of the American Society for Legal History, he has been a member of the editorial board of the Law and History Review since 1996 and a member of the Publications Committee since 1998. His research focuses on race and the law and civil rights.

Sarah Barringer Gordon is Professor of Law and History at the University of Pennsylvania, where she teaches courses in American legal history, church-state relations and property in the law school, and American religious history in the history department. She has been a member of the ASLH since 1991, and has served on the Nominating Committee (1996-99), and the Program Committee (member, 1997, Chair, 1999). She received her Ph.D. in history from Princeton, J.D. and Masters in Ethics from Yale, and B.A. from Vassar. She also serves on the boards of Vassar, the National Constitution Center, the Historical Society of Pennsylvania, and the Library Company of Philadelphia. She is the author of The Mormon Question: Polygamy and Constitutional Conflict in Nineteenth-Century America (forthcoming fall, 2001, from Studies in Legal History, University of North Carolina Press). Recent articles on the law of blasphemy and woman suffrage have appeared in the American Quarterly and the Journal of American History. She has also served on the Littleton-Griswold Prize Committee for the American Historical Association (1996-99, chair 1997-98) and the Hurst Prize Committee for the Law & Society Association (1999-2000), and is on the editorial board of Law and Social Inquiry. She has received fellowships from Princeton University, Cornell University, and the Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation.

Donald R. Kelley is James Westfall Thompson Professor of History, Rutgers University. He studied history at Harvard (BA 1953) and Columbia (PhD 1962), and taught at SUNY Binghamton, Harvard, and Rochester. His interest has been in the interdisciplinary relations between law and history, pursued in his first book, Foundations of Modern Historical Scholarship: Language, Law, and History in the French Renaissance (1970), and in some thirty articles on aspects of the European legal tradition in Italy, France, Germany, and England, many collected in two volumes, History, Law and the Human Sciences (1984) and The Writing of History and the Study of Law (1997). He has also published Historians and the Law in Postrevolutionary France (1984) and a large survey, The Human Measure: Western Social Thought and the Legal Tradition (1990). Among his articles are "Clio and the Lawyers: Forms of Historical Consciousness in Medieval Jurisprudence," Medievalia et Humanistica, n.s., 5 (1974), 25-49; "Vera Philosophia: The Philosophical Significance of Renaissance Jurisprudence," Journal of the History of Philosophy, 14, (1976), 267-79; "Gaius Noster: Substructures of Western Social Thought," American Historical Review, 84 (1979), 619-48; "Civil Science in the Renaissance: Jurisprudence Italian Style," Historical Journal, 22 (1979), 777-97; "Civil Science in the Renaissance: Jurisprudence in the French Manner," History of European Ideas, 2 (1981), 261-76; "Hermes, Clio, Themis: Historical Interpretation and Legal Hermeneutics," Journal of Modern History, 55 (1983), 644-68; "What Was Property? Legal Dimensions of the Social Question in France 1789-1848" (with Bonnie Smith), American Philosophical Society, Proceedings (1984), 200-30; "Civil Science in the Renaissance: The Problem of Interpretation" The Languages of Political Theory in Early Modern Europe, ed. A. Pagden (Cambridge, 1987), 57-78; "Jurisconsultus Perfectus: The Lawyer as Renaissance Man," Journal of the Warburg and Courtauld Institutes, 51 (1988), 84-102; "Second Nature: The Idea of Custom in European Law, Society, and Culture," The Transmission of Culture in Early Modern Europe, ed. A. Grafton, (U. Penn. 1990), 131-72; "Law and Jurisprudence," Cambridge History of Political Thought, 1450-1700 (Cambridge, 1991), 66-94; "Men of Law and the French Revolution," Politics, Ideology and the Law in Early Modern Europe, ed. A. Bakos (Rochester, 1994), 127-46; and "What Pleases the Prince: Justinian, Napoleon, and the Lawyers," History of Political Thought (2001). He has taught courses on history and law, has represented the field of law for the Renaissance Society of America, and has given papers and comments at ASLH meetings.

Victoria List is an Associate Professor of History at Washington & Jefferson College, where she teaches an entertainingly diverse collection of courses, ranging from Ancient Civilization to American Constitutional History. She is also the Coordinator of W&J's Integrated Semester program. She received her law degree from the University of Wisconsin, and her Ph.D. from the University of Michigan. She has of late been on sabbatical, catching up on recent scholarship in her own field (early modern England) and working on two articles, both of which involve church/state questions as experienced in the ecclesiastical courts in the post-Reformation era. Her past service to the ASLH consists of two stints on the Program Committee (1992 and 1999, respectively), membership on both the Sutherland Committee (1994-97) and the Nominating Committee (1997-00, the last two years of which as chair). She also served in 2000 as a replacement member of the Surrency Committee.

Kathleen A. Parrow is professor of history at Black Hills State University in South Dakota, where she teaches early European history and historiography. Her M.A. is from the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee and her Ph.D. is from the University of Rochester. Prior to 1991 she taught at Appalachian State University and the University of Iowa. She has been a member of the ASLH since 1989. She was just reelected as the president of the South Dakota Council of Higher Education, the state faculty union for which she is also the chief contract negotiator. Her publications include From Defense to Resistance: Justification of Violence during the French Wars of Religion (American Philosophical Society, 1993) and "Prudence or Jurisprudence? Etienne Pasquier and the Responsa Prudentium as a Source of Law" in Historians and Ideologues (U. of Rochester Press, 2001). She has presented a number of papers on French and Roman law at various conferences and held an NEH fellowship at the Folger Shakespeare Library in 1998-99 for research on the use of law in sixteenth-century French literature. Her current research is primarily on sixteenth-century French customary law, particularly the issues of guardianship, the age of majority, and the centralization and systematization of provincial French law, with several articles and a book in progress.

Richard Ross is an assistant professor at the University of Wisconsin (Madison), where he holds a joint appointment in the law school and history department. He teaches courses on American legal history, the rule of law in Anglo-American constitutionalism, and Trusts and Estates. His B.A. (1984), J.D. (1989), and Ph.D. in history (1998) are from Yale University. He is engaged in an ongoing study, working its way towards a book on the intellectual history from Yale University. He is engaged in an ongoing study, working its way towards a book, on the intellectual history of legal communications in early modern England and early America. This project has yielded, "The Memorial Culture of Early Modern English Lawyers: Memory as Keyword, Shelter, and Identity, 1560-1640," Yale Journal of Law and the Humanities (1998), which received the honorable mention for the 1999 Sutherland Prize. Other interests include the impact of ethnic diversity on legal culture in early America, and the development of a historical perspective about the effect of electronic media on legal thought and practice. Articles on these subjects have appeared in or are pending in Law and Social Inquiry, The Worlds of John Winthrop: England and New England, 1588-1649 (ed. Francis Bremer), the University of Pennsylvania Law Review, and the William and Mary Quarterly. He has received fellowships from Yale's Institution for Social and Policy Studies; has been a visiting scholar in the Harvard history department (1995-96); and in the fall of 2000 held a Spencer postdoctoral fellowship at the Newberry Library in Chicago. His service to the Society includes participating on the program committee for two years (1998-2000) and, currently, chairing the Surrency Prize selection committee.

Lucy E. Salyer is an associate professor in the History Department of the University of New Hampshire. She earned her doctorate from the Jurisprudence & Social Policy Program at the University of California, Berkeley, in 1989. At the University of New Hampshire, she serves as graduate director and teaches courses in legal history, immigration history and modern American history. She has served on the editorial board of Law & History Review since 1995 and as a representative to the Membership Committee of the Organization of American Historians (1992-96). She has been awarded fellowships from the National Endowment of the Humanities and the American Council of Learned Societies, and the Louis Pelzer Memorial Award from the Organization of American Historians. Her book, Laws Harsh as Tigers: Chinese Immigrants and the Shaping of Modern Immigration Law (University of North Carolina Press, 1995), received the Theodore Saloutos Memorial Prize from the Immigration History Society. More recent publications include "Protective Labor Legislation and the California Supreme Court, 1911-1924," and "A Progressive Judiciary: The California Supreme Court and Judicial Reform in the Progressive Era," both published in the California Supreme Court Historical Society Yearbook. She is currently working on a socio-legal history of citizenship policies between 1898 and 1940.

Graduate Student Nominees:

Karen Bruner is a Ph.D. candidate in history at Syracuse University. Her major area of concentration is modern American history with a focus on constitutional history. Her doctoral dissertation will concern the 1956 U.S. Supreme Court case, Pennsylvania v. Nelson. It continues her interest in the Warren Court and McCarthyism, that she addressed in her history master's thesis, "The Watkins-Barenblatt Enigma: The Supreme Court, the First Amendment and Congressional Investigations" for which she received the Eldon Carter Prize for best university master's thesis in 1990. She received her M.A. in history from the University of Nebraska at Omaha in 1990 and was designated the Missouri Valley History Conference outstanding graduate student in 1988-89. She also holds a B.A. in political science from the College of Wooster and a Master of Arts in Teaching from Cornell University. She has been at Syracuse since 1994, serving as teaching assistant and adjunct instructor in various American history courses. In addition to receiving recognition as an Outstanding Teaching Assistant, she was appointed Teaching Fellow for the Maxwell School Undergraduate Teaching Grant in 1998 to teach with a multi-disciplinary team on a course in Critical Issues for the United States. She has also taught American History and Western Civilization courses at the University of Nebraska at Omaha and with the University of Maryland European Division. She has served on various departmental committees including the search committee for a modern American historian. She has presented papers at the Missouri Valley History Conference and written articles included in Historic U.S. Court Cases, 1960-1990 and American Legislative Leaders in the Northeast, 1911-1994. In the non-academic arena, she has been a secondary social studies teacher and worked for the U.S. Office of Education on programs in international education.

Jed Handelsman Shugerman is pursuing a joint J.D./PhD in history at Yale University. He received his B.A. from Yale College, and will receive his J.D. in 2002. His note in the Yale Law Journal, "The Floodgates of Strict Liability: Bursting Reservoirs and the Adoption of Fletcher v. Rylands in the Gilded Age," jointly won the 2000 Joseph Parker Prize for the best paper in legal history at Yale Law School. His article "The Louisiana Purchase and the Reopening of the South Carolina Slave Trade, 1803-1808" will be appearing in the Journal of the Early Republic in early 2002. His book note on the post-World War II rights revolution and counter-revolution will be appearing in the Yale Journal of Law & the Humanities, and his case note on the death penalty and ineffectiveness of counsel, stemming from his clinical work on capital defense, will be published in the Yale Law Journal. He is currently writing about how legal battles over the control of state courts shaped Marbury v. Madison and revealed its weaknesses. He was a Case and Book Note editor on the Yale Law Journal, and Managing Editor of the Yale Journal of Law & the Humanities. On a Dorot Fellowship and a Milah Fellowship in Israel from 1996 to 1998, he studied Jewish law and history while working for human rights organizations. He is planning on writing his dissertation either on the rise of strict liability or on the changing political and legal rhetoric of various labor organizations from the Civil War to the New Deal.

Nominees for Nominating Committee:

Robert J. Cottrol is the Harold Paul Green Research Professor of Law and Professor of History and Sociology at the George Washington University. He received his A. B. in American Studies from Yale University in 1971 and his Ph.D. in American Studies from Yale University in 1978. He received his J. D. from the Georgetown University Law Center in 1984. He is the author of The Afro-Yankees: Providence's Black Community in the Antebellum Era (Greenwood Press, 1982) and has edited Gun Control and the Constitution: Sources and Explorations on the Second Amendment (Garland Publishing, 1993 and 1994). He has also edited From African to Yankee: Narratives of Slavery and Freedom in Antebellum New England (M. E. Sharpe, 1998). He is currently co-authoring a book on Brown v. Board of Education with Raymond T. Diamond (University Press of Kansas). His articles and essays have appeared in the American Journal of Legal History, Chicago-Kent Law Review, Georgetown Law Journal, Law and Society Review, Slavery and Abolition, Tulane Law Review, and the Yale Law Journal, among others. He is currently doing research on race relations in Latin America, among other areas. His service to the American Society for Legal History includes membership on the editorial board of the Law and History Review (1985-1994), service on the program committee (1995 and 1997) and membership on the Board of Directors (1997- 2000).

Annette Gordon-Reed is a Professor of Law at New York Law School where she teaches Property, Legal History, American Slavery and the Law, and Criminal Procedure. She is a graduate of Dartmouth College and Harvard Law School. She is the author of Thomas Jefferson and Sally Hemings: An American Controversy (University of Virginia Press, 1997). She has contributed essays to several books and journals. Her current writing projects include editing Race on Trial, a collection of essays on famous cases involving race in the United States. Vernon Can Read, a memoir with Vernon Jordan Jr., to be published in October 2001, and The Hemings Family of Monticello, which will appear in 2003. She is on the Board of Advisors of the Papers of Thomas Jefferson, The International Center for Jefferson Studies, and The Frederick D. Patterson Institute (the United Negro College Fund). She is a member of the Society of Historians of the Early American Republic, and the American Society For Legal History.

Renée Lettow Lerner is Associate Professor of Law at George Washington University, where she has been since 1997 and where she teaches the history of legal institutions and the law in England and the United States. She received her A.B. in history from Princeton in 1990, her M.Litt. in modern history from Oxford in 1992, and her J.D. from Yale in 1995. She has published articles on the history of civil and criminal procedure in the United States, focusing on the relationships between judges, juries, and lawyers; these include an examination of the history of new trial for verdict against law and an exploration of judges' power to comment on evidence in the nineteenth century. She has also written about the history of codification efforts in nineteenth-century England. Currently she is researching judicial elections and relations between the bench and bar in nineteenth-century New York, and is planning work on the history of the French judiciary.

Emily Field Van Tassel first joined the ASLH in 1977, which she is appalled to realize was 24 years ago. She is currently serving on the board of directors of the society, and has presented several papers over the years. She received her graduate education in legal history from Case Western Reserve University and the University of Chicago. She earned her J.D. at the University of Wisconsin. She has taught legal and constitutional history (among many other things) in both law and history departments. She has published articles in the fields of family and women's legal history and in the history of the federal judiciary. She has written a book on the history of judicial removal and accountability, and has co-authored a book on the history of federal impeachments. She is currently completing a book on the social history of the Civil War in northeastern Ohio that her father was writing at the time of his death. Her own projects include a co-authored book on the history of judicial independence, and a book provisionally titled "An Alternative to Assassination: Jones v. Clinton and the Impeachment of a President."

Paul L. Murphy Prize

Applications are being accepted for the 2002 Paul L. Murphy Prize, honoring the memory of Paul L. Murphy, late Professor Emeritus of History and American Studies at the University of Minnesota and distinguished expert on U.S. constitutional history and the history of American civil rights/civil liberties. The Murphy Prize, an annual award of $1000, is intended to assist the research and publication of scholars new to the field of constitutional U.S. history or the history of American civil rights/civil liberties. To be eligible for the Murphy Prize, an individual must possess the following qualifications: be engaged, in the judgment of the selection committee, in significant research and writing on U. S. constitutional history or the history of American civil rights/civil liberties, with preference accorded to individuals employing multi-disciplinary research approaches; hold the Ph.D. in History or a related discipline; and not yet have published a book-length work in U.S. constitutional history or the history of American civil rights/civil liberties. Public historians, unaffiliated scholars, as well as faculty at academic institutions are encouraged to apply. If employed by an institution of higher learning, an applicant must not be tenured at the time of the application. An applicant for the Murphy Prize should submit a packet containing the following items: 1) a research project description of no more than 1000 words, 2) a tentative budget of anticipated expenses, 3) a current curriculum vitae, and 4) two confidential letters of recommendation in envelopes sealed by the recommenders. All materials should be mailed to John W. Johnson, Department of History, University of Northern Iowa, Cedar Falls, IA 50614-0701 and must be received no later than December 3, 2001. E-mail inquiries should be addressed to <John.Johnson@UNI.EDU>. Notification of the Murphy Award winner will take place in early 2002.

J. Willard Hurst Summer Institute in Legal History

The first biennial J. Willard Hurst Summer Institute in Legal History convened in Madison, Wisconsin from June 11-22, 2001. Co-sponsored by the Institute for Legal Studies at the University of Wisconsin Law School and the American Society for Legal History, the Hurst Institute brought together twelve early career legal history scholars selected as Hurst Fellows to work intensively with senior scholars for a two week period.

Lawrence Friedman, Marion Rice Kirkwood Professor at Stanford Law School, chaired the Hurst Institute. The other senior scholars were Robert W. Gordon, Johnston Professor of Law and Professor of History, Yale University; Linda K. Kerber, May Brodbeck Professor in the Liberal Arts and Professor of History, University of Iowa; Stanley I. Kutler, E. Gordon Fox Professor of American Institutions at the University of Wisconsin, and also Professor of Law; and Arthur McEvoy, J. Willard Hurst Professor, University of Wisconsin School of Law.

The initial scholars: Professor Edward J. Balleisen, Department of History, Duke University; Ina vom Feld, Max-Planck-Institut für Europäische Rechtsgeschichte; Douglas Harris, York University; Thomas Miguel Hilbink, Public Interest Law Center, New York University; Gwen Hoerr McNamee, University of Illinois Chicago; Ajay K. Mehrotra, University of Chicago; Dr. Stephen Robertson, Department of History, University of Sydney; Marc Simon Rodriguez, University of Wisconsin; Joseph E. Slater, University of Toledo College of Law; Elizabeth Lee Thompson, University of Texas; Dalia Tsuk, James E. Rogers College of Law, University of Arizona; Adam Winkler, University of California Los Angeles.

The success of the Hurst Institute is reflected in the comments of the Fellows. One described the presentation and discussion sessions as "an extraordinarily valuable and intellectually rich experience. . . . It was a unique opportunity to think critically about a variety of theories and methodologies of legal history, and learn about a number of new subjects within the field." Another Hurst Fellow stressed the importance of building a community of scholars: "The discussions we had were some of the best I've had since beginning my graduate education. Our common passion for legal history -- and especially legal history in the Hurstian tradition -- brought me newfound energy and enthusiasm for my current work and my future career. To practice legal history is a more interesting prospect now that I know that I undertake the journey with these people as my colleagues."

The next Hurst Summer Institute is scheduled for June 2003. For information about the 2003 Institute, consult the H-Law website at <http://www2.h-net.msu.edu/~law/>.

Law and History Review

(from Chris Tomlins, Editor)

Members of the ASLH will have noticed (I hope) the changes on-going in the Law and History Review. At the beginning of 1998, the LHR became a three-issue journal -- a change that everyone will have become used to by now. The more observant among us may also have noticed that the size of each issue has been increasing, to the point where we have adopted a new "default" length of 256 pages per issue. Most momentous, of course, is the appearance of the journal in a full "on-line" format under the auspices of the "History Cooperative" <<http://www.historycooperative.org/>>. The Cooperative is an expanding association of leading history journals formed under the auspices of the AHA, the OAH, the National Academy Press and our own publisher, the University of Illinois Press. The four founding partners have funded the Cooperative extremely generously. As one of the first associate members, the LHR is playing an active role in the governance of the Cooperative and in its plans for further development. We hope soon to be in a position to encourage (perhaps solicit) scholarship in legal history that takes full advantage of the representational possibilities inherent in on-line media. Meanwhile, we are taking steps to develop some new features on our own web page <<http://www.press.uillinois.edu/journals/lhr.html>>, notably making available details of forthcoming issues, and in some cases providing "pre-print" versions of selected forthcoming articles in PDF format.

All these developments are testament to the increasing prominence that legal history has attained in historical and legal scholarship at large over the last ten or fifteen years. At the LHR we hope to continue that trend with our next project, a major drive to increase subscriptions, particularly institutional subscriptions. We hope that existing members of the ASLH will be willing to give us a hand in the endeavor -- recruit a new subscriber, or ensure that your institution's libraries receive the journal. We promise not to bombard you with mail, but expect to receive some promotional material during the coming year, and please don't throw it away before reading it!

As always, the LHR expresses its gratitude to the American Bar Foundation for its generous support of the journal's editorial office.

Studies in Legal History

(From Tom Green and Dirk Hartog, co-editors)

Two Series books appeared in Spring, 2001: Charles W. McCurdy, The Anti-Rent Era in New York Law and Politics, 1835-1865; and William E. Nelson, The Legalist Reformation: Law, Politics, and Ideology in New York, 1920-1980. One book is due out this Fall: Sarah Barringer Gordon, The Mormon Question: Polygamy and Constitutional Conflict in Nineteenth-Century America.

We anticipate publication of another half dozen books over the two years, 2002-3, and as many again in the two following years. The editors want to express their great appreciation to the University of North Carolina Press and especially to Chuck Grench, Executive Editor at the Press, who has gotten the Series's third decade at North Carolina off to a fine start.

Tarleton Law Library Legal History Series

The Jamail Center for Legal Research has launched the Tarleton Law Library Legal History Series with an illustrated essay about an illustrated medieval legal manuscript.

"The Illustrations of the Sachsenspiegel: A Medieval German Law Book", is by Guillermo F. Margadant, Mexico's leading legal historian. Margadant guides the reader through the striking and unusual visual symbols used to illustrate legal points in the Sachsenspiegel, or "Mirror of the Saxons."

The Sachsenspiegel was originally written in the 13th century and was cited in German case law until the early 20th century. It covered everything from legal procedure to feudal law and family law.

The publication includes 16 illustrations from the Wolfenbüttele Sachsenspiegel, one of four 14th-century illustrated manuscripts of the law code which survive. In an essay that is both scholarly and entertaining, Margadant shows how the illustrations and the text are intimately related, and how they provide a window on society and politics in medieval Germany.

The author, a Professor Emeritus at the Universidad Nacional Autónoma de México, was a visiting professor at the University of Texas School of Law for over a decade. "Professor Margadant has been both an active user and a generous supporter of our Law Library for many years," said Professor Roy M. Mersky, director of the Jamail Center for Legal Research. "As a result, I'm delighted that our Legal History Series begins with a publication of his."

Margadant is the author of the standard textbook on Mexican legal history, now in its 12th edition, and is an internationally recognized authority on Mexican, Spanish, Roman, canon, and Japanese law. Two Mexican presidents have honored him for his professional and academic accomplishments.

The Tarleton Law Library Legal History Series plans to publish a wide range of texts, including historical essays, oral history interviews, annotated bibliographies, and unique documents.

"If there is a common thread between Professor Margadant's essay and those that follow in this series, it is to show the importance of libraries and archives for legal history," said Mersky. "I hope the series will inspire others to explore the rich sources of our legal heritage, and to share the riches with others through their writings."

"The Illustrations of the Sachsenspiegel" is published in an edition of 500 copies. Copies may be purchased for $15 via the Jamail Center's publications website, at <<http://www.law.utexas.edu/pubs/order.htm>>, or by contacting the Publications Coordinator (Publications Coordinator, Jamail Center for Legal Research, University of Texas School of Law, 727 East 26th St., Austin, TX 78705-3224; phone 512/471-7726; fax 512/471-0243).

An insider's look at one of America's greatest Supreme Court justices has been published by the Jamail Center for Legal Research, University of Texas at Austin, as the second volume in its Tarleton Law Library Legal History Series.

"Inside Justice Hugo L. Black: The Letters", is by John P. Frank, who began his distinguished legal career as Justice Black's law clerk in 1942. Frank drew on his file of 25 years' correspondence with Justice Black, and his notes on their conversations over the years.

Justice Black's son, Hugo L. Black, Jr., said in his foreword to "Inside Justice Black" that "This little collection shows the trust and respect of each for the character and intellect and learning of the other -- the kind of trust and respect that sparks unreserved dialogues for truth."

Justice Hugo L. Black was one of the most influential jurists of the 20th century, and has a place on almost any list of the all-time top ten Supreme Court Justices. He is best remembered for his defense of civil liberties. "Much of our Constitution today is Black's constitution," writes Frank.

Based on their conversations and letters, Frank paints an intimate portrait of Justice Black the family man, the mentor, the jurist, and the civil libertarian. Frank describes Black's relationships with his colleagues on the Supreme Court, including the "feud" between Black and Justice Robert A. Jackson that allegedly arose when Jackson was passed over for the Chief Justiceship in 1946.

John P. Frank has been named several times as one of the 100 most influential lawyers in America by the National Law Journal. A noted attorney and scholar, he has authored a dozen books on constitutional law and legal history, and has taught in the law schools at Indiana University and Yale. He assisted the NAACP in Brown v. Board of Education and was the lead attorney in the landmark Miranda v. Arizona case.

The editor of the Tarlton Law Library Legal History Series is Michael Widener, Archivist/Rare Books Librarian at the Jamail Center for Legal Research.

The publication can be ordered via the Jamail Center's publications website, at <http://www.law.utexas.edu/pubs/order.htm>, or by contacting the Publications Coordinator (Publications Coordinator, Jamail Center for Legal Research, University of Texas School of Law, 727 East 26th St., Austin, TX 78705-3224; phone 512/471-7726; fax 512/471-0243).

Visiting Scholars, Center for the Study of Law and Society, U.C. Berkeley

The Center for the Study of Law and Society, founded in 1961, fosters empirical research and philosophical analysis concerning legal institutions, legal processes, legal change, and the social consequences of law. The Center invites applications from scholars with interests in all aspects of law and social ordering/social change. Visiting scholars will be part of a scholarly community that includes fellow visitors and a faculty of distinguished socio-legal scholars in law and economics, legal history, sociology of law, political science, criminal justice studies and legal and social philosophy. Core faculty members of the Center include Robert Cooter, Lauren B. Edelman, Malcolm M. Feeley, Robert A. Kagan, Christopher Kutz, David Lieberman, Kristin Luker, Robert MacCoun, Daniel L. Rubinfeld, and Harry N. Scheiber. Among the Law School's faculty members who have conducted research projects in the Center or are otherwise closely affiliated with it are Howard Shelanski, Linda Krieger, Richard Buxbaum, Frank Zimring, and Herma Hill Kay.

Application Requirements

1. Applicants must possess a Ph.D. or J.D. (or foreign equivalent).
2. Applicants must submit a full curriculum vitae.
3. Applicants must submit a cover letter which specifies the time period in which they wish to be in residence at the Center and which describes their proposed program of research or study. Applicants must pursue a program of research or study which is of mutual interest to faculty members at the Center for the Study of Law and Society.

4. Applicants must indicate the source of funding while visiting Berkeley, e.g. sabbatical pay, scholarship, government funding, personal funds, etc. Monthly minimum requirements for foreign exchange scholars are: $1600 per month for the J-1 scholar, $500 per month for the J-2 spouse, $200 per month for each J-2 child.

Among privileges and opportunities of Center visiting scholars are: library privileges at the Law School and at all campus libraries; access to a weekly luncheon-speaker series and other scholarly exchanges; other campus privileges, including athletic facilities; and, when possible, assignment to shared or other office accommodations.

The Center will consider applications for varying time periods, from two weeks duration to the full academic year. Applicants should submit the information listed above by post or e-mail to: Visiting Scholars Program, Center for the Study of Law and Society, University of California, Berkeley, CA 94720-2150, csls@uclink.berkeley.edu. Inquiries to the Acting Director, Professor Harry N. Scheiber, scheiber@uclink.berkeley.edu are also welcome. The Center's Web site is: www.law.berkeley.edu/institutes/csls/
