Welcome to Washington D.C. and the 2015 Annual Meeting of the American Society for Legal History. The capital city has countless sites for research and exploration. However, as you will see in the following pages, the program will limit our journeys into the archives and tourism. It is filled with compelling sessions that will challenge us to think and talk about topics, times, and places that encompass the breadth of our engagement with the legal past. And the program reveals as well the diversity of participants who will gather together here in Washington; they range from historians just entering our field to well-established scholars and they come from a broad array of places and institutions. What unites us all, and what will limit our forays in this fascinating city, is the intellectual richness of this meeting’s formal sessions and the informal conversations they and our shared interest in legal history will provoke. We are united as well by the generosity and openness to new people and ideas that have long been the hallmarks of this Society.

The annual meeting is arguably the most important thing the Society does. The meeting like so many ASLH activities is organized by volunteers and we are indebted to a host of people for putting it together. They cannot all be thanked individually but I want to single out some of them. Co-Chairs Martha Jones and Charlotte Walker-Said and the 2015 Program Committee are to be congratulated for putting together such an engaging and innovative set of sessions as are the presenters, commentators, and chairs who will bring them to life. I also want to thank the committees that have identified books, articles, research projects and career achievements for us to honor. The officers, directors, and committees that make the ASLH such a vibrant organization are to be commended as well at our annual meeting. And, to return to our location, I want to express our appreciation to Renée Lerner and the Local Arrangements Committee for making Washington such a hospitable site in which to gather.
Finally, we are grateful to the United States Supreme Court and particularly Justice Elena Kagan for hosting the plenary reception and to the George Washington University School of Law for sponsoring the welcome reception. We are equally appreciative of additional support for the meeting provided by Georgetown University Law School, the University of Maryland's Department of History, Cambridge University Press, the program advertisers and meeting exhibitors, and the many members who made special contributions to help underwrite the attendance of graduate students and independent scholars.

I hope that each of you has a wonderful experience at the 2015 meeting.

Michael Grossberg
President, ASLH
On behalf of the faculty of The George Washington University Law School, I am delighted to welcome you to our nation’s capital for the annual meeting of the American Society for Legal History. We are honored to host you for today’s opening reception.

This is a particularly important time for GW Law as we celebrate the 150th anniversary of the law school’s founding in 1865. We have come a long way from our humble beginnings as a part-time program enrolling 60 students at the site of the old Trinity Church to one of the largest, most renowned, and diverse members of the legal academy. Over the years, the law school has benefited enormously from its location at the legal hub of the nation. U.S. Supreme Court Justices have frequented GW Law’s classrooms throughout the law school’s history. In the late 19th and early 20th centuries, Justices John Marshall Harlan and David Josiah Brewer both served as full-time members of the faculty while also serving on the U.S. Supreme Court. Today, Justice Clarence Thomas co-teaches a weekly constitutional law seminar at the law school and his Supreme Court colleagues regularly judge GW Law moot court competitions and speak at law school events.

At GW, we acknowledge the critical role that history plays in the study of all aspects of law, and provide our students with a solid understanding of the foundations upon which contemporary law is built. Even in the first year of law school, students learn the intricate system of grants of property developed centuries ago in medieval England, the historical differences between adversarial and inquisitorial systems of justice found around the world that eventually led to many of the constitutional protections we enjoy today, and the saga of poor Mrs. Palsgraf. As students progress, they might learn in international law courses more about the role of legal history of other countries, including the Spain of Vitoria and Suarez, and the Netherlands of Grotius.

We also are proud of our faculty scholars, many of whom focus on legal history topics in their writing. I must point, in particular, to Renée Lettow Lerner, one of the co-authors of the leading textbook on legal history; Robert Cottrol, an internationally recognized authority on the Second Amendment and the conjunction of race and law in the American hemisphere; and Eleanor Brown, a leading scholar focusing on the legal and social history of the Caribbean. And, of course, the many constitutional law scholars at GW, such as Brad Clark, almost always incorporate legal history into their writings.

It would be impossible to support such efforts without maintaining one of the leading research libraries in the country. We are proud of the Jacob Burns Law Library, which has an amazing collection of rare and historical legal materials. With an emphasis on French, Roman, and Canon law, and holdings that include over 160 incunables, the library is a magnet for scholars from around the world. Indeed, through the Richard and Diane Cummins Grant, GW has proudly sponsored researchers seeking to use the collection, including Emily Kadens from Northwestern University and Aniceto Masferrer from the University of Valencia. The staff of the Burns Law Library will be exhibiting some of the jewels of the collection during today’s reception.

Enjoy your time here in our beautiful city and best wishes for a successful and valuable meeting.

Sincerely,

Blake D. Morant
Dean and Robert Kramer Research Professor of Law

Legal Reform and Innovation

The 2015 conference will incorporate a third (and positively final) Adelaide Blackstone symposium. Following ‘William Blackstone: Life, Thought, Influence’ (2007) and ‘Re-interpreting Blackstone’s Commentaries’ (2012), the 2015 symposium will discuss ‘Blackstone and his Critics’. On Wednesday 9 December, a workshop for Higher Degree by Research students and Early Career Researchers will be held at Adelaide Law School, The University of Adelaide.

Keynote Speakers

Amalia Kessler (Stanford)
David Lieberman (UC Berkeley)
Michael Lobban (LSE)
Kristen McKenzie (Sydney)
Lyndsay Campbell (Calgary)
Philip Schofield (UCL)

Founded on 5 December 2009 (St Nicholas’ Eve) in The Hague, the European Society for Comparative Legal History (“ESCLH”) was born out of frustration with the narrow nationalism and geographical segregation of legal history in contemporary European scholarship and professional organisations. We take a wider view. The Society aims to promote comparative legal history, the explicit comparison of legal ideas and institutions in two or more legal traditions. We acknowledge, too, that comparative law and legal history (internal or external) are fundamentally related. Both comparatists and legal historians are travellers: the one in space, the other in time. If only to establish context to more restricted research, legal historians should always look beyond the spatial borders and jurisdictional boundaries—including our present national legal systems—that are themselves products of the past. This isn’t merely useful background information. Legal history in general, and European legal history in particular, was fundamentally plural, a dynamic interaction of multifarious common and particular laws. Legal historians shouldn’t ignore this.

The Society also appreciates the importance of generating dialogue across national and disciplinary boundaries to achieve our goals. To accomplish this, we have established a blog, held an inaugural conference, and begun cooperation with those with shared aims. Our blog provides a site for information and discussion. It hosts a register for those with research interests in any area of legal history.

The Israeli History and Law Association

The Israeli History and Law Association was established in 2005. Its purpose is to serve as a meeting place for scholars who deal with various aspects of the intersection between history and law. The association aims at scholars of history, Israeli history, law, Judaic studies, Islam, and the Middle East, as well as classicists, social scientists and others interested in various aspects of legal phenomena. The Association enables researchers to keep informed on contemporary research topics in the various areas, to clarify shared theoretical and methodological issues, to deal with common problems in resources, accessibility to archived sources, databases and others. The Association’s major activity is its annual meeting, held jointly with Yad Izhak Ben-Zvi each Fall.

Simply stated, Thomas Lund has given us one of the most important works on law in this generation.

Stephen B. Presser
Raoul Berger Professor of Legal History
Northwestern University School of Law

The book is altogether a stunning achievement and will be especially valuable for the light it throws on subjects dear to the hearts of medievalists who are not in themselves legal specialists, indeed, who have tended to avoid the linguistically forbidding Year Books.

William Chester Jordan
Princeton University

An innovative invitation to the fascinating world of the medieval English Year Books.

John Hudson
University of St Andrews

Modern lawyers and laypeople are often daunted by the inaccessibility of the early sources... It is for just this reason that this masterful compilation and commentary by Professor Thomas Lund offers such a great contribution to the study of the history and evolution of our legal culture....

Foreword
Richard Epstein
New York University School of Law

Pollock and Maitland’s classic History of English Law ends at the death of Henry III. Lund explains the transformative events that followed and their influence on contemporary American and English law. In this modern compilation and commentary, the most important medieval cases are paraphrased and analyzed, making this interesting and entertaining litigation accessible to everyone.

New book proposals for legal history titles are always welcome. Please contact Valerie Horowitz, Managing Editor (e-mail: vhorowitz@lawbookexchange.com), or see our website for submission guidelines.
Talbot Publishing is pleased to announce the publication of a new legal history journal:

JUS GENTIUM
Journal of International Legal History

This is the first journal in the United States dedicated to the history of international law. Much of modern scholarship on the history of international law is preoccupied not with international law, but with international legal doctrine; the doctrinal writings of remarkably few individuals dominate the discourse while the rest remain unseen or overlooked. This journal will encourage further exploration in the archives, for new materials and confirmation of the accuracy of past uses, and it will welcome the continued reassessment of international legal history in all of its dimensions.

Freedom Papers
An Atlantic Odyssey in the Age of Emancipation

Rebecca J. Scott
Jean M. Hébrard

$19.95

This saga opens with the enslavement of a woman from Senegambia, and then traces her family’s quest, across five generations, for lives of dignity and equality. The story of Rosalie and her descendants unfolds against the background of three great antiracist struggles: the Haitian Revolution, the French Revolution of 1848, and the U.S. Civil War.

Degrees of Freedom
Louisiana and Cuba after Slavery

Rebecca J. Scott

BELKNAP PRESS $23.00

As Louisiana and Cuba emerged from slavery in the late nineteenth century, each faced the question of what rights former slaves could claim. Degrees of Freedom compares and contrasts these two societies in which slavery was destroyed by war, and citizenship was redefined through social and political upheaval. Both Louisiana and Cuba were rich in sugar plantations that depended on an enslaved labor force. But by the beginning of the twentieth century, they diverged sharply in the meanings attributed to race and color in public life and in the boundaries placed on citizenship.
The Georgetown University Law Center welcomes the American Society for Legal History to Washington, D.C. Dean William Treanor and Georgetown’s other constitutional and legal historians would like to draw your attention to the remarkable holdings of the Special Collections Department of the Edward Bennett Williams Law Library, located on the Law Center’s campus, just up New Jersey Avenue from the Hyatt Regency at 111 G Street, N.W.

Special Collections maintains holdings on the history of law and government, the Law Center Archives, and the National Equal Justice Library (NEJL). Our rare books range from a 1485 Justinian’s Pandectorum to the annotated library of the federal judge Charles E. Wyzanski, Jr. Our most significant volume is Sir Edward Coke’s annotated 1569 imprint of Bracton.

Our earliest manuscripts are English land grants dating from the late 13th century. We also hold the judicial notebooks of Lord King and Lord Eldon, several collections pertaining to the Tokyo War Crimes Tribunal, the correspondence of Judge Jesse Adkins, including letters to and from Felix Frankfurter concerning Adkins v. Children’s Hospital (1923). The Law Center Archives document the school’s history from its founding in 1870 and were used extensively in The First 125 Years: An Illustrated History of Georgetown University Law Center (1995) and other studies of American legal education.

NEJL is a unique collection dedicated to preserving the legal profession’s history of providing counsel for those unable to afford it through the legal aid and public defender movements in the U.S. and other countries. It includes oral history interviews of the key participants in Gideon v. Wainwright and many other criminal defenders and legal aid lawyers.

Special Collections invites interested conference attendees to visit us and view highlights from our collections on Friday from 9 a.m. – 5 p.m. and Saturday from 1 p.m. – 5 p.m. in the Special Collections Reading Room (Williams Library Rm. 210).

The Historical Society for the District of Columbia Circuit welcomes the American Society for Legal History to Washington, D.C.

The Society began its work in 1990 by commissioning Jeffrey Brandon Morris’s Calmly to Poise the Scales of Justice: A History of the Courts of the District of Columbia Circuit (Carolina Academic Press, 2001), available for purchase through the Society’s website (http://dcchs.org/). It conducts a program of oral histories of judges, other court officials, and Washington lawyers. Eighty-eight interviews have been completed, and an additional forty-three are underway. The interviews provide anecdotes about family relationships, personal observations about careers and interactions with colleagues, comments on significant court decisions, and much else. Most appear on the Society’s website; the rest are in public repositories in Washington, D.C.; only a few remain under seal.

Videos of the Society’s many public programs also appear on its website. These include “Women in the Life and Law of the D.C. Circuit Courts,” “Duran and the Evolution of the Insanity Defense in the D.C. Circuit,” “The D.C. Circuit in the McCarthy Era,” and “The Steel Seizure Case in Historical Perspective.” Also online are elements from displays at the E. Barrett Prettyman U.S. Court House, portraits of individual judges, official portraits of the Court of Appeals from 1905 through 1977, and an exhibit on the District Court and its predecessors from 1863 to 2013.

The Society also conducts a mock oral argument program for D.C. high school students. It welcomes new members and submissions of short articles (1,500 words or less) on the Circuit’s history for its much-frequented website.
