2025 PLENARY LECTURER

Lisa Ford

Lisa Ford is Endowed Professor of Modern British Imperial History at George Washington University. She is a long-time member of the ASLH, having first presented her work at the annual meeting as a graduate student in 2006. More recently, she has served on the Cromwell Dissertation and Wallace Johnson award committees, and as co-editor of the society's Studies in Legal History series. A graduate of Columbia University in New York, her work centers on ideas and practices of order in the post-1763 British Empire and the early national United States. She is the prize-winning author of four monographs: Settler Sovereignty: Jurisdiction and Indigenous People in America and Australia, 1788-1836 (2010); Rage for Order: The British Empire and the Origins of International Law, 1800-1850 (2016), co-authored with Professor Lauren Benton; The King's Peace: Law and Order in the British Empire (2021); and Inquiring into Empire: Colonial Commissions and British Imperial Reform, 1819-1833 (2025), co-authored with Professor Kirsten McKenzie, Dr Naomi Parkinson and Professor David Andrew Roberts. Ford is currently working on a history of emergency law and executive power in the English-speaking world from the eighteenth century onwards.

ASLH PRESIDENT'S WELCOME

Dear ASLH colleagues

Welcome to the 2025 Annual Meeting of the American Society for Legal History! I am especially thankful for the opportunity to gather this year.

We are meeting for the first time in Detroit! On behalf of the Society, I extend my warm thanks to our local supporting and sponsoring institutions. On Thursday, Detroit Mercy College of Law will be hosting the Student Research Colloquium and the Wallace Johnson Program for First Book Authors. The Society's graduate student and early career programs are vital to the intellectual and professional lives of the individual participating scholars, to the future of the field of legal history, and to the Society's dynamism. I am also grateful to the Department of History at Wayne State University for hosting this year's two important pre-conference symposia: "Queer Legal History" and "Imperial Administration: Law, Colonialism and the Growth of the U.S. Administrative State."

We are fortunate this year to have support for all three of our evening receptions which are so important in providing an opportunity to reconnect with friends, make new connections, and continue conversations begun in panels earlier in the day. Wayne State University Law School is providing financial support for the Opening Reception on Thursday evening. On Friday afternoon we hold the annual plenary lecture, the one time during the conference that we all gather for a lecture and shared scholarly event. We are deeply appreciative to the University of Michigan Law School for its sponsorship of the post-plenary reception that evening. And on Saturday evening, Michigan State University College of Law is supporting the closing reception. As those of you who have attended the ASLH before well know, the receptions at the close of each day are crucial to the success of the annual meeting. Thank you to all these extraordinary institutions for their generous support.

One of the greatest rewards of serving as president is seeing first-hand the commitment members have to each other, to the field of legal history, and to the Society and the concrete reflection of that commitment in the countless hours of volunteer labor members give to Society work. I thank my fellow officers for their knowledge, expertise, good humor and daily labors to keep the Society running and in good order. I thank the editors, chairs, and members of the many ASLH committees whose talent, dedication, and hard work have built and sustain the high caliber of the Society's journal, Law and History Review, and book series, Studies in Legal History. I thank all those who make successful our signature programs for early career scholars: the Student Research Colloquium, the Early Career (Virtual) Legal History Workshop, the Hurst Institute, and Wallace Johnson First Book Program. I thank those who make possible and lead virtual initiatives that allow us to build and sustain community through the year and across the globe, including our monthly book series for discussing new works in the field, Making Connections: New Works in Legal History, and our first themed virtual workshops. I thank all those who give hours of time to reading research proposals, dissertations, articles, and books as members of prize and fellowship committees, and those who think across the careers of leaders in the field for nominations to the Society's highest honor: Honorary Fellows. I thank those whose creativity, initiative, and work generates new sources of financial support to sustain our many programs into the future. And I thank the many whose financial gifts to the Society's endowed programs assure that the vibrancy our field and Society enjoys today will continue into the future.

The annual meeting is the culminating event of the volunteer labor of members that is carried on throughout the year. I especially want to thank the 2025 Program Committee, co-chaired by Deborah Dinner and Jessica Marglin, who have assembled an outstanding program that showcases the dynamism and breadth of the field of legal history. Thank you to the Standing Committee on the Annual Meeting, chaired by Justin Simard, and the former chair Joanna Grisinger, for their work in bringing this meeting to Detroit this year. And many thanks to the Local Arrangements Committee, chaired by Sam Erman, for the warm welcome they have given us to Detroit. I thank all those who well after they have completed a formal term on a committee or office are ready at a moment's notice to offer counsel, wisdom, how-tos, and support. And I am grateful to all those who over the decades have dedicated themselves to building a Society that is open, generous, inclusive, and supportive. We are extraordinarily fortunate in our community.

I look forward to seeing you in Detroit!

UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN LAW SCHOOL

On behalf of the University of Michigan, it's my pleasure to welcome you to Detroit for the Annual Meeting of the American Society for Legal History. This city, with its remarkable legal and cultural legacy, offers an inspiring backdrop for your conversations and collaborations.

At Michigan Law, we are fortunate to house a thriving scholarly community of legal historians. Our faculty and students explore the history of the United States and the wider Americas. They look further backward to ancient Roman law and the laws of Medieval Europe, and further overseas to the history of Chinese legal frameworks and institutions, among others. We also host the University of Michigan's Program in Race, Law, and History, an interdisciplinary program dedicated to research and teaching across these lines of intellectual inquiry.

On the occasion of her retirement, we would especially like to recognize and celebrate Rebecca Scott's many important contributions to supporting the field of legal history here at Michigan Law and as past-president of the Society. In addition, several faculty members have given their time to help organize this year's events, including Bill Novak on Michigan Law's sponsorship of the plenary session, Kristin Collins on the program committee, Sam Erman and Naomi Lamoreaux on the local arrangements committee, and Emily Prifogle as the incoming Society secretary. Many more Michigan faculty and graduate students appear on this year's program and serve on the Society's other committees.

We also extend our thanks to the Society's Standing Committee on the Annual Meeting, the Program Committee, the Local Arrangements Committee, and the Local Resource Team for their efforts in organizing this conference. Michigan Law is honored to host the plenary reception, and we thank you for enriching the ongoing dialogue in legal history. We wish you a productive meeting and a memorable time in Detroit.

Warmly,

Neel U. Sukhatme

MICHIGAN STATE UNIVERSITY COLLEGE OF LAW

Esteemed colleagues,

On behalf of Michigan State University College of Law, I am pleased to welcome you to Detroit for the 2025 Annual Meeting of the American Society for Legal History.

Detroit is central to our own law school's history: MSU Law traces its roots to the Detroit College of Law, founded here in 1891 as Michigan's first independent law school. We are honored that the Society has chosen Detroit for this year's gathering.

MSU Law is home to a vibrant community of interdisciplinary scholars in many areas of study, including education, history, microbiology, philosophy, political science, and social policy. The scholarship of our legal historians continues to influence modern legal practice and education, underscoring the value of historical inquiry into law in modern society. Professor Justin Simard's Citing Slavery Project uncovers the ways in which American courts and legal practitioners rely on cases involving enslaved people. Professor Laura Savarese traces the historical role of children in reshaping evidentiary doctrine and constitutional rights, and Professor Noga Morag-Levine studies the comparative legal history of environmental and public health regulation.

My own research into the history of federal courts and administrative adjudication reflects a conviction I know many of you share – that history is essential to a just and effective legal system.

This year's meeting marks an important transition for the Society, as Barbara Welke concludes her service as President and Mitra Sharafi of the University of Wisconsin begins her term. This Big Ten connection emphasizes the bonds of scholarship and collegiality that link our institutions.

Detroit has long been a city of innovation, resilience, and transformation. It put the world on wheels, welcomed generations during the Great Migration, and gave birth to the Motown sound that has shaped global culture. It is a fitting place for scholars of legal history to gather and exchange ideas.

While you're here, I hope you have time to experience some of our city's rich history. Enjoy the conference. And please join us at the closing reception, which MSU Law is proudly sponsoring.

Sincerely,

WAYNE STATE UNIVERSITY LAW SCHOOL

Dear colleagues,

On behalf of Wayne State University Law School, it is my honor to welcome you to Detroit for the 2025 Annual Meeting of the American Society for Legal History. We are proud to sponsor this year's opening reception and to host the pre-conference symposium in our University Student Center.

Legal history matters to us at Wayne Law. In addition to scholarly work in the field produced by our faculty members, our law school houses centers and archives helping to steward and share important legal historical work. The Damon J. Keith Center for Civil Rights preserves the papers of Judge Keith and other leaders in the African American legal community, offering invaluable resources for scholars of civil rights and social justice. The Levin Center for Oversight and Democracy, now celebrating its tenth anniversary, curates extensive collections of congressional oversight materials and produces scholarship and public programming that shed new light on accountability in American governance. Its work includes a pathbreaking "Portraits in Oversight" series that brings to life important oversight investigations in our country's history. These initiatives exemplify Wayne Law's mission to connect rigorous scholarship with pressing civic challenges.

Beyond the law school, Detroit and Wayne State University offer a wealth of historical and archival resources. The Burton Historical Collection at the Detroit Public Library and the Charles H. Wright Museum of African American History house extensive records of the city's legal and cultural life. At Wayne State, the Walter P. Reuther Library of Labor and Urban Affairs, home to the largest labor archives in North America, offers rich materials on the history of unions, industry, and urban development. Our proximity to Michigan's courts, auto industry, and civic institutions provides fertile ground for research and exploration, and we are proud to collaborate with historians across the University's College of Liberal Arts and Sciences in advancing this work.

We are delighted that this year's meeting brings legal historians from around the world to Detroit. We hope that you will find the conference intellectually stimulating and that you also take time to enjoy the city's rich cultural, historical, and architectural heritage. From the Detroit Institute of Arts to Motown, from our historic neighborhoods to our resurgent downtown, Detroit offers a unique setting for conversations about law and history.

Thank you for joining us here. We are honored to welcome you, and we look forward to the ideas, collaborations, and connections that will emerge from this year's gathering.

Warm Regards,

Richard Bierschbach

Dean, Wayne State University Law School

UNIVERSITY OF DETROIT MERCY SCHOOL OF LAW

On behalf of University of Detroit Mercy School of Law, welcome to Detroit—a city shaped by resilience, activism, and innovation. We're proud to host you during this year's Annual Meeting of the American Society for Legal History and honored to support a community of scholars deeply engaged in exploring the impact of law and history.

Detroit Mercy Law is a diverse, urban Catholic law school in the Jesuit and Mercy traditions. Since opening in 1912, we have been educating the complete lawyer in the heart of downtown Detroit at the Riverfront Campus, which overlooks the Detroit River—an international border that connects the Great Lakes. Many of our students are from the metro Detroit area, deeply connected to the city, and choose Detroit Mercy Law with the intention of practicing in and serving this region.

Much of Detroit Mercy Law's legacy flows from the connection to our city, our commitment to social justice, service, and clinical legal education. Each year, students provide over 35,000 hours of pro bono legal services to residents of Detroit and the surrounding communities.

Our faculty and students engage with the law as it intersects with issues rooted in the history of Detroit and the surrounding region—urban policy, environmental justice, religion, immigration, and more. Each year, incoming students begin their legal education with orientation sessions grounded in history, encouraging them to consider law's role and impact across time—from past injustices to present challenges and future possibilities.

We hope you'll make time to explore Detroit during your visit. Enjoy its storied past, ongoing transformation, and historic institutions with a wealth of material to inspire legal historians.

Thank you for your work.

Best Regards,

Nicholas Schroeck

Dean & Professor of Law

WAYNE STATE UNIVERSITY, DEPARTMENT OF HISTORY

Welcome to Detroit! On behalf of the history department at Wayne State University I am delighted to welcome you to this city for the Annual Meeting of the American Society for Legal History. We are honored to be part of this conference and to sponsor pre-conference meetings on our dynamic urban campus. Both the pre-conference symposium on “Queer Legal History” and the pre-conference symposium on “Imperial Administration Law” will be held in our Student Center, which is open to all. Working with Justin Simard and Barbara Welke to arrange our participation has been a true pleasure, and the department is grateful for the opportunity to be part of this intellectually exciting conference.

The history department has long been part of an interdisciplinary approach to studying law at Wayne State University. In conjunction with the Law School, we offer a joint degree program which allows students to pursue a master’s degree in history while they pursue their JD. Our campus is also the site of the Reuther Archives, which in addition to housing the largest labor archive in North America, also collects materials dealing with the civil rights movement, the history of multiple unions, and the history of Detroit.

The city itself includes sites of interest to scholars of legal history. Detroit, located on the border with Canada, had one of the last stops on the Underground Railroad at the Second Baptist Church. The Detroit Institute of the Arts contains the majestic Diego Rivera murals that recount the perennial struggle between capital and labor. The events of the civil rights movement left great marks on the city, including the Birwood Wall that was built to separate Black and white homeowners on the west side of Detroit. Rosa Parks’ home and gravesite tie this place to one of the foundational moments of the civil rights revolution. I hope that you will all have a chance to visit some of these places that have shaped our past.

Sincerely,

Janine Lanza

CODE OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT

We seek to ensure that all participants in the ASLH annual conference conform to appropriate and approved norms of professional conduct in a context free from harassment and discrimination. We affirm our commitment to maintaining an atmosphere conducive to the collegial and open exchange of scholarly viewpoints and information. Registrants for the conference agree to conform to AHA standards for professional conduct adopted by the ASLH. For information on those standards, and guidelines for reporting violations or for raising concerns, see further: <https://aslh.net/professional-conduct-at-aslh-events/>

If you encounter a possible violation of the ASLH Code of Professional Conduct at the annual meeting, there are two avenues of assistance:

1. The Annual Meeting Resource Team

Members of the Resource Team provide informal support and works with members to ensure that their concerns are heard in a safe and (when possible) confidential environment. The Resource Team is focused on members' well-being and will not investigate or recommend action.

Please feel free to contact any of us at the meeting for consultation:

- Sally Gordon: sbgordon@law.upenn.edu (cell 215-307-6409)
- Zach Herz (chair): zachary.herz@colorado.edu (cell 347-244-6126)
- Kate Markey: markeyk@umich.edu (cell 734-255-0542)

2. Formal Written Report to the Professional Liaison Committee

This committee has the primary responsibility for ensuring that the Code of Conduct is followed and communicating with the Resource Team. The committee is designed to be responsive to members' concerns and to take timely action to ensure smooth operations and maintenance of collegial and respectful ASLH meetings and other activities. The committee is charged with receiving and reviewing formal complaints via email to the professional-liaison-committee@aslh.net, or fill out the document on this webpage <https://aslh.net/professional-conduct-at-aslh-events/>, which will be promptly reviewed by the ASLH Professional Liaison Committee.
